

DELICAT2

After you have conducted a search for material in DELICAT you will receive a results list.

What you see initially in the results list is a brief record. This allows you to see the basic information regarding the materials found during your search. This includes the author, title, publication information, format (for example, whether the item is a book, a journal or a government publication), subject headings, as well as the location of the item (which is important so you know in which one of the libraries the item is located).

To confirm that the material is currently available and not checked out- click on the "Holdings" link within the record. If the book is currently available, the words "On Shelf" will appear under the "Due Date" heading. If the item has been checked out and is currently not available, you will see a date under this heading which indicates when the book is expected to be returned.

Additionally, you can see whether or not the item is a part of a specific collection within the Library (such as Browsing or Reference) and the book's call number, which is its location on the Library shelves. A book's call number is the book's address on the shelves. You are able to print this information by clicking on the "Print" button in the lower left-hand corner. In order to return to your results, you can click on "Results List" at the top of the page.

Click the tutorial's "Next" button to learn how to use the call number to find a book on the shelves.
